Some of General Grant's Disappoint.

We think it necessary to say that in suggesting to Mr. Grant some days ago that he ought to resign and go to Europe we did not speak in any sense as his Excellency's organ, as may have been supposed by some hasty or ill-judging persons. We have not the privilege of his intimacy, nor even of the intimacy of his intimates. The bappy thought did not come to us through Mr. Dick Harrington, or Governor Shepberd, or even General Casey. It was inspired-as we do not doubt Mr. Grant at once saw-solely by our devotion to his Excellency's credit and good name and our conviction that he would improve both by abandoning his attempt to govern the country. As the humble but attached friends of Mr. Grant it is our duty to tell him that, considered as a President, he is a failure. He has many fine qualities; he is an excellent judge of horses; he has an unimpaired digestion, which is a good deal in these days of farming. At about 9 o'clock the peddler dyspepsia; he has a keen eye for the main chance in a business transaction, and there are good reasons for thinking that he might make a fine reputation as a real estate agent. But, to speak profanely and after the Galena manner, he "makes a mighty poor President." The Herald has for a long time done its best to coneeal this deplorable fact from his Excellency. Everybody else has, of course, seen it long ago. If there is anything the American people, office-holders excepted, are unanimous upon it is that Mr. Grant does not understand civil government. But that did not concern us so long as we could hope to conceal from his own eyes the wretched of it. What could it matter to us or to Mr. Grant how unbappy the nation was so long as he was happy?

He appears to us, however, sometimes to have suffered from a dim apprehension that he was unappreciated. When, a day or two ago, he told a committee of southern men that the white men of Louisiana and Mississippi are "ungrateful," we saw a touching evidence of this. After all he has done for to make them virtuous, after the carpet-baggers be has set over them to attend to their taxes and finances, after Sheridan, and Kellogg, and Casey, and Ames, and a host of remain unhappy, and, what is worse, "ungrateful." It must be very discouraging to

Then, again, in his last annual message there Mr. Grant's great spirit has been wounded. For instance, if he had set his heart on any one thing everybody knows it was to reform the civil service. So determined was he to achieve this great work that his fertile mind even conc-ived the brilliant strategem of making the civil service as corrupt and inefficient as possible, in order, as everybody can see, to make the work of reformation the Grant pathetically describes it in his last me-sage. He says: "Generally the sup-consulted them; and this when he had plainly told the public in two different dispatches that he had?

Why should we go on barrowing up his Excellency's soul? Is it not enough? The southern white men ungrateful, the civilservice reformers complaining, Congress negleeting his most important recommendations, as, for instance, that in which he thoughfully urged it to "direct the employment" of our "national products," and, and soon got into bed. MISTAKEN IDENTITY-THE ERROR INTO WHICH A WOMAN TRAVELLER FELL ON AN Ono Railroad.—The Columbus correspondent of the Cleveland Leader relieves the monotony of his accounts of the current legislative news by such stories as the following, which he relates under date of the 221 instant:

"A committee of the Cuyahoga county bar, consisting of Messrs. William Heisley, John C. Grannis, Jason Canfield, and Henry C. Kanney, came down yesterday to look after the interests of the bill abolishing the Superior Court. While on the train they became engaged in an animated conversation, in the course of which Siz William was frequently and in dread of. I am afraid that we shall learn familialy addressed as 'Bill.' Opposite the who will bear a little description. One was an old man whose subdued expression of countenance, bald head, and general air of downheartedness spoke eloquently of years not seen him since I was a boy. I think he of martyrdom and long suffering under the iron rule of a shrewish wife. A suspicious twinkle of a secretly-roguish eye testified, however, that he was generally ready to improve any opportunity that might offer itself to escape from domestic tyranny and indulge in amusements which his better haif would look upon with horror. The other was a great big masculine-looking female, with an awful eye, a hooked nose, and a blue gingham umbrella. Her general make-up would have convinced the most careless student of human nature that she was the lawful ruler of the unhappy being who sat beside her. This good lady had pricked up her cars when the word 'Bill' first fell upon them, and by the time she had beard it repeated two or three times she had worked herself up into a very excited state of mind, which speedily found yent in the following tirade: 'I say, Josiah, do you hear that That chap over there with the ugly grin on his face and the big chaw of tobacker in his check is Canady Bill. I heard them other fellers call him Bill, and I'll bet my Sunday bunnitt his first name's Canady. It takes her five minutes to make good lady of her mistake, and she subsided, leaving all quiet along the lines."

A PEDDLER'S NIGHT RIDE.-A peddler named John Marburger has for many years tramped over various sections of this and neighboring counties selling his wares; and by a consistent course he has won the confidence and esteem of a large number of acquaintances. On Tuesday afternoon about 5 clock the peddler opened his pack in the kitchen of a man named Eshelstaub, in Albany township. The farmer's wife purchased to the custom of that neighborhood, was asked to remain for supper, which he did, and subduring the evening much of the conversation entered upon matters pertaining to was shown to a large garret under the roof where he was to sleep. The family rehoofs. He arose and looked out of the window towards the barn, when an extraordinary sight met his gaze. The dogs were in an adjoining field, and, strange to say, there of the farmer's young horses. The farmer of the county on?" "Just the same." appeared to be a ghost riding about on one called the hired man, and on going to the garret with a lantern they found the bed which had been occupied empty, work he had made and is continually making and the peddler gone, but his clothes still hanging on a chair, where he had evidently placed them. The farmer and bired tion of his mysterious rider. The bired man watched his chance, caught the animal, nambulism. He had nothing on him, ex-cepting his shirt, undershirt, drawers, and stockings, and notwithstanding the coldness of the night he was perspiring freely when others--after all, these southern white men lifted down. They could not waken him properly until he was led in the house, and when he came to his senses he seemed to know nothing of what had occurred. He seemed startled at being out of true recuperative of brain-power, the only are traces of disappointment-signs that even bed and down stairs in such apparel.
